

In January 2021, International Decoration will be there. This 12th edition will express a salutary renewal. Our Deconews is a way of maintaining this precious link between us. Nice reading with these houses already listed ...

... and see you soon!

The botanical garden is a magical place, with a sea of exotic plants and historic greenhouses whose windows allow in the scattered light. As if looking into a snow globe, you embark upon a journey through miniature, manicured versions of alluring deserts, magnificent primeval forests and mysterious steppes, passing through several eras of landscape gardening with numerous stylistic elements drawn from foreign cultures.

Here and there, you might discover exotic butterflies and the colourful plumage of birds in the multi-layered interplay of lush green tones. And while the senses are engaged, trails of discovery provide the stranger with some comforting structure. The garden becomes a place of inner peace, bringing order and balance to the wildness of nature. In parks dotted with whimsical pavilions and grandiose greenhouses from the turn of the century, you embark on a romantic journey through time and escape everyday life for a while in hedge mazes and cloistered walkways.

The BOTANICAL GARDEN collection by Zimmer + Rohde is dedicated to this interplay between stimulation and relaxation, thinking and feeling, wildness and order.

The Indoors and Outdoors break free from limitations to give way to terraces that show off the elegance of their materials all the way to the floor, weaving a natural link between inside and outside.

Codimat Collection affirms this chic new sunlit lifestyle with three collections of rugs woven with natural fibres.

In January 2021, the International Decoration Fair will be ready to roll. This 12th edition will represent a new and healthy comeback. Our Déconews is one way for us to maintain our valuable bond with you. We hope you enjoy reading this instalment, which includes the brands that have already signed up, and we'll see you soon...

thesign presented their new collection at Paris Déco Off in January to resounding success. The collection draws from nature, an archive of shapes and colors that never ends. It's a journey from a bamboo forest to the volcanic shores of the Arctic Circle. Along the way we encounter predators of the savanna to the color drenched plumages of the jungle. This collection captures the wonder that nature instills in our souls, from a commanding landscape to the water droplet on a single leaf. A selection of 14 new fabrics, comprising 150 colorways in total. Building from basics of cotton velvets and corduroys, dense wool wovens, to chenilles. Moving into textures of herringbone weaves, hand-woven looks, and animal hides. Topping off with signature patterns of bird feathers, metallic monsters, and a sublime burnout silk velvet. The hallmark of luxury is quality and choice, this collection does not disappoint.
